Up the Creek grant funds distributed

By Virginia Parke

Rosie's Cracker Barrel, owned by Stew and Sandy Cough, played host to another historic event on Saturday. The survivors of Los Helechos and Camp Steffani flood devastation gathered for a barbecue and pot-luck dinner to celebrate receiving their grants from the Carmel Valley Sun sponsored 'Up The Creek' Relief Benefit.

A surprise grant gift of $100, presented by Dorothy McEwen and Kathleen Tarp, went to each of the 22 survivor children. Along with the grant, Toys R Us donated over $500 in toys. After checking with all the parents, Stacie Crane headed the committee that selected the toys.

A single mother of an infant shared that she is using her grant to replace all the baby's furniture and bedding that was destroyed. "It was scary. The baby's room is lower than the rest of the house, it sustained the majority of damage." Another family with two children indicated that they would be replacing all the

by Elizabeth Cowley

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce (CVCC) Board of Directors met last Thursday, February 16, at 5:30 at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station.

CVCC Treasurer Don Condren reported that the Chamber currently has just over $3,600, but that most of the major debts have already been paid. CVCC President Burney Threadgill confirmed that inspirational speaker Stan Evans will speak at the Chamber's March 15th luncheon. Marjorie Lovenridge, Chair of the Mixers Committee, informed the Board that the Carmel Business Association is interested in holding a joint luncheon with the CVCC in June.

The CVCC has been working on constructing a Visitors' Information Center in front of the Crossroads to allow member businesses to advertise their services in a high traffic area. The center would provide a phone so that interested parties could call directly from the center for additional information, reservations, etc. Currently there is a 75 foot easement in the area where the CVCC would like to place the information center. Supervisor Sam Karas instructed the CVCC to send a diagram of the site and proposed information center both to him and to the Department of Public works, and that he would work on acquiring an easement variance.

Becky Minearo, Past President of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, appeared to share helpful hints to the CVCC. The Monterey Peninsula Chamber has over 1,200 members county wide. Ms. Minearo stressed the importance of making new members feel welcome. The Monterey Peninsula chamber has an ambassador program where current members

"If these walls could talk..." Well they did Saturday at the "A Night at the Old Buckeye" fund raising event for the Carmel Valley Branch of the Monterey County Library.

The library building's history was recalled by many of the 600 that attended. The idea, hatched by local attorney Barry

Harrow, brought together some of the former patron who had celebrated major life events and couples who had met at the "Buckeye Restaurant" before it became the library.

Konny Gloy reported the event raised $5,000. This brought the goal of the "Keep The Koors Open" fund within $500 of the $10,000 needed for the next fiscal year.

Observing the socializing and merriment, Kay Kirkland, Carmel Valley Sun's business manager stated "Carmel Valley is a wonderful place just looking for a party to happen." As usual, it took the committed efforts of many, starting with Friends of the Library president Susan McDonald-Brodey and co-sponsoring Kiwanis president, Bruce Michels.

An adobe home build in the 40's before being converted to a restaurant, then library, the Buckeye building's walls have indeed been privy to many a life's story, probably even a birth. One of the evening's guest, an any-minute-mother-to-be stated that she was "three centimeters dilated and ready to go", but not before joining in the celebration to support the library.

Chuck Woodson, his mate, Sherry Thomas along with Mike Kucher and Ted Leidig—all former Buckeye owners—donated the food and drinks accompanied by many a hug and reminiscence. Additional donations came from Baum and Blume, Bon Appetit, Holman Ranch, Jimmy and Cliff, Oak Deli, Plaza Linda, Thai Bistro and The Wagon Wheel. Outstanding local vineyards, Bernardus, Durney, Joullian and Ventana contributed cases of wine.

Raising her glass to toast the fun and food, Janna Greorgy related that "this was her first time out after a 69 days stay in the hospital." Big Sur Water, Sosnick Grocery Supply, Premium Beverage and the Hospice also sent beverages.

The club style atmosphere was created

A family with three young children related that they were going to buy "household stuff" like bedding, kitchen utensils and appliances. "We need so many small things and they add up to a lot of money." One person stated that she is going to replace "all stuffed things" including a futon mattress. "The pollutants in the water destroyed its usability."

The "River Rat Cowgirls", Kristin Crane, Jessica Jones, Tasha Jones, Jenna Mahoney and Julie Rogers performed to the song "Hero" by Mariah Carey bring tears to the eyes of several survivors. Kathleen Tarp sang her laughter provoking "flood medley" for the group. Pat and Robin Mahoney thoughtful provided a flat bed truck decorated with daffodils for the stage. Jim Fitch of the Holman Ranch operated the barbecue.

The amount donated to the flood survivors as of Tuesday, February 21 is $25,027. There were 34 grant applicants requesting an amount of $180,000. A majority of the funds raised have been distributed. There will be additional distribution at intervals as more donations are received. Contributions can be made by sending a check to: Carmel Valley

Micro brewing comes to Carmel

A brand new family-owned and family-run microbrewery is gearing up to start brewing on the Monterey Peninsula at the end of this month, making Carmel Brewing the first microbrewery to hit the Monterey Peninsula.

Paul Tarantino is the owner of Carmel Brewing Company; the brewmaster will be Bob Weisskirch.

Tarantino was born and brought up in Carmel Valley, and went to college at Oregon State University where he experienced firsthand the phenomenal rise of the region's microbrewing industry.

"We want the Carmel Brewing Company to stand for superior quality, hand-crafted beer that is always fresh," says Tarantino. "We want to give local people a beer they can be proud of, and visitors a beer they can come back for. We're bringing art back into the science of brewing."

Village Flood Relief (CVVFR) address, P. O. Box 149, Carmel Valley CA 93924.

Admiration of the survivor's courage was voiced by Sun publisher, Norman Spaulding. While nature dealt the residents of the Rosie's Bridge and Camp Steffani a blow, their neighbors and community have countered with support

Rosemarie Rogers expressed the group's gratitude, "We and the children are going to remember this event not only because of the devastation, but also because of the support and the celebration of community caring."

by furniture and drapes lent for the occasion courtesy of The Pebble Beach Company and Hidden Valley Music Seminars. Larry and Mike Barber with John Ford worked on the lighting.

"The community support has been inspiring. We are definitely going to do this next year!", stated Librarian Gail Knoles. Virginia Rugg Studio, and Kasey's supplied the sign sights publizing the event. Skip Marquard loaned a field down the street for parking.

Lining up with Friends committee members Konny Gloy, Kathy Nielsen and Doug Pease, volunteers for the evening included: Jerry Foote, Sally Dane, Rose Ford, Illia Thompson, Laura Bayless, Tim Crisler, Tom Gloy, Mary Siquig, Bill Drake, Doris Daly, Nina Laub, Marshal and Wendy Dela Haie Matthews, Ann Flood, Bob and Tom Nielson, Bob Kucher, Sarah Pease, Wendy Kimber and David Moore.

Bob Meadows and Lee Rieman were in charge of security. Members of the Carmel Valley and Jamesburg Fire Department Volunteers directed the parking traffic. A hazardous job on Carmel Valley Road.

Lori Kline coordinated five hours of music. The group represented some of former Buckeye regulars. Playing to the packed house was Larry Hosford and Friends, Jay Tolagson and Friends joined by Brian Diamond, Nan Heflin, Kathy Reclusado and Billy Ingram.

There were 30 Buckeye bartenders, Chris Cayce and John Zielinski among them and waitresses, Connie Laub and Joan Zielinski included, who took up their old trays wearing T-shirts designed for this occasion by Fashion Streaks of Sand City.

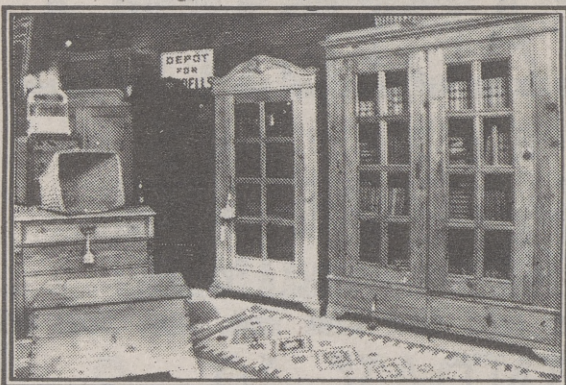

Teresa Sakasegawa, Randy and Charlene Randazzo of Carmel Valley Market and Lorraine Tarantino, who presold tickets were amazed at the crowd. "Seems like we did this just last week-end at the 'Up The Creek' Benefit", Charlene muttered, weaving her way through the throng.

Mark and Dorothy Enyati beamed at the extent of the support. They also support the library by furnishing an additional 5,000 book lending library facility at Teeleet Antiques.

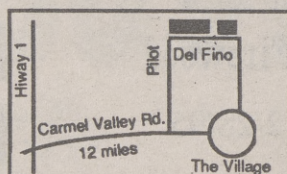

There are a few T-shirts remaining. They can be purchased at the library and at Kasey's for $15. In addition to keeping the library doors open on Wednesdays, scheduled library improvements include the installation of new carpet, courtesy of Monterey County Free Libraries, after which a new comptuer with CD-ROM and Internet capabilities will be up and running thanks to the efforts and commitment of the Friends of the Carmel Valley Library. Doug Pease thoughtfully provided background information on the event. (I know, you did not want me to use you name twice, but you deserve the acknowledgment.) Carmel Valley is certainly a community blessed with an abundance of caring and talent people!

County Task Force to review events surrounding flood

Fifth District Supervisor Sam Karas has established a Carmel River Flood Task Force to review the sequence of events which occurred on the night of the flood in Carmel Valley. The group will also review the County's Multi-hazardous Emergency Response Plan to determine what was supposed to have been done before and during the flood, as well as what was, in fact, done.

The group will develop suggestions for improving the response of public agencies during emergencies. It will recommend remedial measures, both procedural and physical, which will insure, as far as possible, that neither life nor property is subjected to undue risk during emergencies. The group's findings will be reported to the Board of Supervisors.

Supervisor Karas emphasizes the need to have neighborhood input into the process. The Task Force is composed of representatives of public agencies, County departments, private institutions, and members of the public from the affected areas.

For further information on the Task Force, contact Task Force Chair Charles Page, 373-1008, or Alex Abercrombie at 647-7755.

are "assigned" to new members to keep them informed and get them involved. Ms. Minearo likened a Chamber to a health club, the more you put into it the more you will get out of it.

To identify goals and to keep focused, the Monterey Peninsula Chamber spends a full day at the beginning of the year creating a Marketing Plan and a Membership Plan. These plans clearly set forth goals and how they are to be achieved. Ms.

Minearo said that having a written "road map" to reference all year is helpful in keeping focused and achieving goals.

The CVCC promotes business and tourism in Carmel Valley, provides information about Carmel Valley businesses, and is active in community fund-raising. The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors meets every third Thursday at 5:30 at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Department Community Room; the meeting is open to the public.

Robert Louis Stevenson High School in Pebble Beach was founded in 1952 as an all boys school. Coeducation was introduced in 1976, and young women began boarding at the school in 1987. RLS Senior Risa Goldstein from Newport Beach is one of about 90 young women boarding at RLS.

As an excellent student with demonstrated leadership, Risa is a prefect in the Dayhall dormitory. The duties of a prefect include assisting the corridor master, a live-in teacher, in maintaining order in the dorm. RLS publishes a yearly journal of student fiction, poetry and essays entitled Vailma. Risa is on the Vailma staff composed of students who choose the entries to be published in the journal.

In an ever changing world where young adults are challenged with any nontraditional issues, RLS has expanded its educational opportunities to include some non-traditional forms of education, including the Senior Forum class and the Wilderness Program. As Risa Goldstein has demonstrated leadership skills, she was chosen by the faculty to participate in both of these programs. Senior Forum is a class led by seniors for sophomores in "real issues." In this program the students are allowed to decide what they want to study and discuss, and receive guidance from the carefully selected seniors. Topics have included sex, drugs, politics, college, and racism.

The Wilderness Program was started last year. It is an experimental educational program modeled after Outward Bound programs to teach students self-confidence, cooperation, and how to exceed self imposed limitations. Risa Goldstein will face the challenge of leading a team of 8-10 sophomores in an 11 day experience in the Ventana Wilderness Area. Each of the 4 teams will include 8-10 sophomores, 2 senior leaders and 1 faculty leader. The highlight of the program is the solo, where each student spends 36 hours alone.

Risa Goldstein

In addition to her academic work and leadership activities, Risa is also the Co-captain of the Varsity Volleyball team. Almost all of RLS graduates go on to complete a Bachelors Degree; Risa is eyeing East Coast Universities Williams and Brown.

Pony League! . . . Saturday, February 11, was the magic day for pony League tryouts. But if you missed it, don't despair. Call Ed Canadas at 659-1266. We need every single graduate of last year's majors as well as all interested others. Carmel Valley is going places in Pony!

Let's give three cheers . . . We have some important names in the news this week, a roster of volunteers who have kindly donated their time and talent to coach our Little League teams. In listing their names, we'd love to play favorites, but can't think of any way to do it. We herewith present a shining roster of stalwarts in a certain mysterious order. YOU get to figure out what kind of order, a bit like last column's trivia quiz.

Drum-roll, please . . . The four mighty teams of the Single A Division boast the following managers: putting some sting in the Hornets, Neil Vandervort; setting sail with the Pirates, Mo Moulaison; uncowed by the Toros, Robin Jenkins; and howling with the Wolfpack, Richard Rosen.

For the powerful Double A Division: braving the Braves, Jamie Warren; soaring with the Eagles, Rick Smith; riding with the Rangers, Rusty Vandervort (is there a dynasty developing here?); and pulling up the Red Sox, our jovial giant graduate of Tee-Ball, Jim Saxton.

So now, almost drained of intoxicating verbosity we swagger up to the plate with the big guys. Our major managers, managing to move magnificently midst moms maneuvering and men meddling: Larry ("Maltese") Wareken of the Falcons; Gary ("Warpath") Pennington of the Indians; Glen ("Felis Tyrannis") Nolte of the Tigers; Jeff ("The Roar") Watts of the Lions; and Tom ("Fireball") Ocampo of the Volunteers.

Next time you see any one of these fine Valley folks, tip the ol' baseball cap, offer words of praise, and volunteer to help coach. We owe them all our great thanks, and we can express those sentiments by supporting the managers, the coaches, and most particularly, the young men and women who play on the teams. It is they, after all, to whom our lovely community dedicates its efforts, assuring their joy in sport and the continuation of our tradition of baseball in paradise.

Speaking of dynasties . . . (There is a pun here about live long and dynasty, but we can't quite seem to exhume such humor, so let it pass . . .) Question of the week: Is there a gene for baseball in the Vandervort family DNA? You might have noticed that the name Vandervort popped up twice in the managers' section (and no doubt some of their players will pop up more often than that). But did you know that during the 1950 baseball season at Carmel High, a certain redheaded hurler mowed down the opposition with fiery pitches and a batting average that at one time approached . . . 500. Since then he has married Joan, his high school sweetheart, moved to Carmel Valley, raised a family, and changed his hair color all the better to match the frosts of a winter morn. So what do you think: does baseball indeed lurk in the Vandervort family, Gene?

Tryouts . . . The day broke clear, Venus jewel-like in the east, the jewels of the golf tour scrambling toward Pebble in the west, another shorts-and-tee-shirt day in sundrenched upper CV. Tryouts for CVLL were to start at 1 with the 9 year olds, then the tens, go to the 11s and 12s at 2:30.

The sun blessed us benignly; Gary's outfield was emerald; Pam's infield was raked to Ryoan-ji perfection; Jon Siegel's old leather hat darted purposely about (with John underneath, natch); Deborah shuffled her papers and Wendy cleared her throat for the opening announcement from the booth; and only one dog -- not a golden retriever -- pranced across the field.

Then, guess what? From somewhere out near the Arctic Circle a blast of wind roared up the river bottom, reminding us all that the hounds of Spring had some considerable bounding to do before they caught up with Winter's traces.

But not to worry: about four hundred and thirteen thousand bemitted nine year olds jammed into the dugout, followed by an equal volume of tens, all of whom fielded and flung and ran and hit. The results: everyone got done about 3 in the morning.

"Old Buckeye" library fundraising participants - Mr and Mrs Roger Willaims, Mr and Mrs Don Swiess and Janna Gregory.

John Siegel can no longer raise his right arm from having fed the pitching machine for eight hours. We've never seen a lawyer work so hard unless it was Glen Nolte, who must have broken not only the record for number of ground balls hit to muchkins, but his ulna as well. (Yet the good man still has his sense of humor.)

Draft players, not beer . . . Tryouts led to the Draft on February 19. Thanks not only to John and Glen, but also Howard Rosen, who kept order in the dugout; Pam Priano, who knew where everything was; the aforementioned Deborah Wareken, who really did manage to keep all the records straight; and Deborah's sidekick in the announcer's booth, Wendy Thomas, whose dulcet tones are by now quite familiar to the neighbors of the CVLL fields. Great job!

A special tip of the cap . . . Rick Tully patrolled the dugout with Howard Rosen. Rick has no kids in CVLL, he has no ambitions to manage, coach, run the snack bar, or wangle his kid onto a team. He was down from Oregon, and he wanted to help out. We should all be so generous of our time, as Rick was generous of spirit. Let's hear it for a good guy.

REAL ESTATE Rand Smith

SELLING REAL ESTATE IS NOT JUST A JOB

In college, I slept through most of the obligatory accounting classes I took. I was an English Major, and the world of business seemed far removed at that age. In my major I read tales of the human spirit and distant lands. Perhaps that's why I chose real estate as a business. We real estate people have no use for accounting. It's a people business.

We don't have cash flow, we have cash spurts. We have Mastercard on bad months and on a good month we buy a new car. Our balance sheets never do.

We don't have profit and loss. We have a real estate habit. We spend all we can afford to advertise and promote ourselves so we can convince the public to call us so we can list or sell another home we can brag about. Many of us have working spouses.

We don't have inventory controls. We take listings. If the oldest one we had sold this week, we call that FIFO ("forever in, finally out"). If we have a listing that sells in one week, we call that LIFO ("luckily it's fast out!").

We don't have time cards. We work our own hours, all 24 of them. If we're not doing something in the office, we're on the phone through most of dinner and into the night. We never have time to eat, even though we constantly struggle with our weight.

We don't have flow charts. We have people to call, properties to see, projects to complete, places to be. They're all unrelated to each other, need to be done now and need following up on. They're scribed on the back of napkins, back of envelopes, margins of flyers. We own two or three different time planners.

We don't keep records. We have drawers and boxes of receipts. We fear audits, but understand they only happen to someone else.

Yes, we real estate agents are people persons. We spend our lives trying to make other people happy or satisfied. So we sacrifice our family's time; we wake up and panic at 3 a.m.; we work Sundays and holidays; we feel guilty taking vacations.

We real estate people are in a business that is almost impossible to manage. When there are not enough sales to pay the bills we get stressed out and go into depression. When there is too much business to handle, we get stressed out and go into overload.

We have the impossible task of making the buyer happy because he got the most house for the least money, and making the seller happy because he sold the same house for the most amount of money with the least amount of problems.

The satisfaction and recognition we get when things go well is worth more than any amount of compensation. The commissions we earn seem to offset the trauma of our daily chaos.

When I was in college, I didn't dream of being a real estate agent. Now I wouldn't dream of being anything else.

Why? Because we real estate agents are the purveyors of our country's greatest product: land. We real estate agents represent our country's greatest spirit, free enterprise.

And the work of business sometimes still seems far removed.

VALLEY FINANCE Douglas Pease

When I tune into the financial channel at lunchtime, there's this gent inviting me to "Die Rich!" I must lack financial sophistication, because I still like "Live Well!" If I buy that gent's life insurance policies in the amounts he recommends, HE will certainly live well and I will certainly die anyway.

If you awaken one morning with an insatiable impulse to Die Rich, I hope you will give me a call. I can arrange that as fast as the gent on TV... but what will you do while you wait for the finish?

If, on the other hand, you awaken one morning and smell the coffee, take the day for yourself and determine what you REALLY want to accomplish, and how long you think it will take. That conversation will last the rest of you (very rich) life. If you seek financial advice, you will know what to ask for and how much you need.

So there it is: "Live Well!" can last a lifetime, while "Die Rich!" is a terminal concept, at best. Still, it does have certain ring to it...

ENVIRONMENTAL HAZARDS IN THE HOME

by William Smith

The Environmental Hazards disclosure laws in California may sound as if they only apply to an abandoned commercial site, but environmental hazards can exist in many forms within the home as well. Toxins such as those used for insect, rodent or weed control constitute a contaminant, as does automobile oil which has been disposed of improperly. These toxins seep first into the soil and then make their way into water supplies. Asbestos textured ceilings or formaldehyde contained in pressboard can be a problem in older homes.

So explained Loretta Loop, Pacific Grove attorney, when she recently answered Monterey County listeners' questions as a guest of William J. Smith on his radio show, "Real Estate by Pacific Bay."

Loop emphasized that, "The purpose of the environmental laws is to solve problems before they happen. If environmental hazards are either disclosed by the seller or found at the time of the buyer's inspection, solutions are possible. If necessary, the concern can be taken to mediation or arbitration and, if still not resolved, the buyer always has the option of backing out of the sale."

Whose responsibility to clean it up? The Department of Health can look to the former owner, and in some cases a previous tenant can be held responsible. A good rule of thumb is that if it's a concern to you now as an owner, mention it to the buyer. The best protection for the buyer against possible liability is to have a professional inspect the property beforehand.

For information on Environmental Hazards in and around your home, contact the Department of Health or your real estate professional.

Members of the public are encouraged to attend. Supervisor Karas will serve as moderator of the forum. Vance Baldwin, Superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District, Karl Pallastrini, Carmel Middle School Principal, and Gerald J. 2-14

- A Carmel Valley Village resident reported that several items, including jewelry and food, were taken from her home some time during the day. An authorized cleaning company had made an unscheduled cleaning of her residence on this date.

- A Pacific Grove woman reported that a tenant on Valley Way had listed false information on her rental application and had not paid rent since December of 1994.
- A call was received from a residence on Viscaino Road from a woman requesting help. A second call was received from a person who said she was a care giver for the first caller and the call could be ignored. A welfare check was made. The resident of the house, 84, was determined to be unable to care for herself and refused to remain with the care giver. She was taken to Community Hospital on a mental health hold.
- A Carmel resident was arrested for battery of his live-in girlfriend.
- A Fern Court resident reported two of her dogs received similar wounds about two weeks ago. She believes the wounds to be gunshot wounds, but could not substantiate it. No suspects.
